EXPLANATORY NOTES

The object of this bill is to amend the Act respecting correctional services in order to enable a judge who directs that a person be released on supervised probation to impose methods of supervision that include electronic monitoring devices.

In addition, the bill enables the Government to order that any immovable can be used for the detention of inmates and be converted into a house of detention administered by a private company.

Lastly, the bill provides that the grounds for an inmate's temporary absence will, in future, be limited to humanitarian and medical reasons and will be recorded in the inmate's file.
