Entitlement.

3. Every beneficiary ordinarily resident in Québec is entitled to income security benefits provided he is eligible thereto in accordance with Division II.

Additional benefits.

4. Every beneficiary is entitled to receive, in addition to income security benefits, benefits paid under a transfer payment programme, under the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 (Statutes of Canada) or under the Act respecting work income supplement (1979, chapter 9), indemnities paid under the Workmen's Compensation Act (Revised Statutes, 1964, chapter 159), and pensions paid under the Québec Pension Plan (1965, 1st session, chapter 24) or any equivalent plan, if he otherwise has the right to such benefits, indemnities or pensions under the said programme or the said acts.

Exceptions.

5. However, a beneficiary is not entitled to combine income security benefits with benefits paid under

(a) the Social Aid Act (1969, chapter 63);

(b) social assistance for Indians; or

(c) any other guaranteed annual income programme of general application in Québec.

Deductions.

The benefits contemplated in subparagraphs a to c of the first paragraph shall therefore be deducted from any payment of income security benefits contemplated in this act and payable for the same period.

Election.

However, a beneficiary may at any time elect to receive the benefits contemplated in the said subparagraphs a to c, rather than the income security benefits.

DIVISION II

CONDITIONS OF ELIGIBILITY

Conditions.

6. A beneficiary unit is eligible to receive income security benefits if, during the year preceding the submission of the application contemplated in section 32,

(a) its head spent at least 120 days conducting harvesting and related activities of which at least 90 days were spent away from a settlement, and spent more time, during the same period, conducting harvesting and related activities than time in wage employment, without taking into account, in either case, time spent in guiding, outfitting or commercial fishing or the period of time in which he was in receipt of unemployment insurance, workmen's compensation or manpower training allowances;

(b) it derived the greater part of its earnings from harvesting and related activities, excluding earnings from guiding, outfitting or commercial fishing;

(d) it was eligible under paragraph a or b and one of its members was the victim of an accident during seasonal employment, which resulted in his becoming eligible for workmen's compensation and which also resulted in such unit's not being eligible under paragraph a or b;

(e) it was eligible under paragraph a or b and its head was forced to abandon or diminish his harvesting and related activities in order to allow animal populations to increase to a harvestable level, which resulted in such unit's not being eligible under paragraph a or b;

(f) it was eligible under paragraph a or b and its head was engaged in a manpower or self-improvement programme, which resulted in such unit's not being eligible under paragraph a or b; or Equivalent activities.

Furthermore, harvesting or related activities may be replaced, for the purposes of the eligibility of a beneficiary unit, by land development activities, to the extent and on the conditions determined by the Board, after a specific activity has been the subject of a decision of the Minister to the effect that it is a land development activity.

Years of benefits.

7. The beneficiary unit contemplated in paragraphs c to g of section 6 is eligible and entitled to income security benefits during the current year and the subsequent year, even if one or more of its members receive the benefits contemplated in subparagraph a, b or c of section 5.

DIVISION III

Failure to reimburse such amount of overpayment entails the suspension of entitlement to income security benefits until such amount is reimbursed.

Advance.

14. A local administrator may pay to the head of a beneficiary unit who intends to be absent from the community for a period of ten consecutive days or more, for the purpose of conducting harvesting or related activities or land development activities having been the subject of a decision of the Minister pursuant to the second paragraph of section 6 and who has not benefited under the provisions of the third paragraph of section 12, an advance, upon his next regular payment, in the amount of $100 per eligible adult in the beneficiary unit.
